

ABSTRACT

The high-power press pack semiconductor module (1) comprises a layer (3, 4), which is brought into direct contact with one or both of the main electrodes of the Si semiconductor chip (2), said layer being made of a metal matrix composite material whose coefficient of thermal expansion can be tailored to a value either close to or matching that of Si.

(Fig. 1)